The Hardesty House
G-IV-A-221
5306 Hutton Road
Oakland vicinity
1889
Private

This two story frame, side gable roofed dwelling is currently known as the Hardesty House and is located at 5306 Hutton Road. Facing west onto the original John Mehan Road, the house dates to 1889. Situated amidst pine trees, the property is bounded by a treeline to the north and east, a gravel drive and ascending hill side to the south, and a ditch line to the west. The house is hidden directly from Hutton Road, accessed only by a long gravel drive which leads from the south.

According to the current owners, the Hardesty House was built in 1889. Facing west onto the original road to Crellin and historically known as the John Mehan Road, the property helps to document Garrett County agricultural trends during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The house is typical of late nineteenth century vernacular architecture.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

This two story frame, side gable roofed dwelling is currently known as the Hardesty House and is located at 5306 Hutton Road. Facing west onto the original John Mehan Road, the house dates to 1889. Situated amidst pine trees, the property is bounded by a treeline to the north and east, a gravel drive and ascending hill side to the south, and a ditch line to the west. The house is hidden directly from Hutton Road, accessed only by a long gravel drive which leads from the south.

The rectangular, single pile, main block has a three bay wide facade and an interior corbeled brick chimney stack. Contemporary to the house and located at the rear or east wall is a one story, stone and concrete block, gable roofed building. Believed to function as a cold room, the structure was joined to the original rear wall sometime during the mid 1950's when the two story, frame, single bay, wall was erected. Appended to the 1950's addition is a single story, frame, shed roofed enclosed porch. Piercing the asphalt shingle covered roof is a metal flue. The main block rests upon an uncoursed rubble stone foundation and except for the stone cold room, the exterior walls are covered with asbestos shingle siding.

All of the windows are modern replacements which consist of single sash double hung sashes with aluminum trim. The single leaf front door is comprised of fifteen glass panes and bordered by wood mullions. The three bay wide, single story, frame front porch has a lattice-covered skirting, four square posts and a tripartite frame wall.

The outbuildings share similar features such as single storyed and gable roofed. The garage is constructed with formed concrete blocks in a rusticated pattern. It has a horizontal wood sided facade gable and a modern horizontal rolling garage door. Situated to the northeast is a frame chicken house. Obscured from the house and built into the hillside is an icehouse. Atop the hill, at the rear of the property is a modern metal covered machinery shed.

Evaluation for:

☒ National Register      ☐ Maryland Register      ☐ not evaluated

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance reports, complete evaluation on a DOE Form - see manual).

According to the current owners, the Hardesty House was built in 1889. Facing west onto the original road to Crellin and historically known as the John Mehan Road, the property helps to document Garrett County agricultural trends during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The Hardesty House is associated with a period when successful farmers constructed new dwellings and farm outbuildings. The house is typical of late nineteenth century vernacular architecture.
